at the end of your employment

Explanatory notes

If you leave Shell service and you have a partner, a portion of your accrued pension capital is used by default to purchase a Partner's pension. If you were to die before the retirement date that applies to you under the Regulations, your surviving partner will then receive a Partner's pension until his or her death.

Important!

You and your partner may decide not to purchase a Partner's pension. Please note that in that case your partner will not receive a Partner's pension from SNPS if you were to die before your retirement date. Your accrued pension capital will remain the same. You will be able to purchase a higher retirement pension (and possibly a Partner's pension after retirement). We advise you, before you make your final decision not to purchase a Partner's pension before retirement to discuss the consequences of that decision thoroughly with your partner.

Please choose which part of your accrued pension capital, you do not wish to purchase Partner's pension.
